

PRACTICE POLICY FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF HEALTH INFORMATION

Nature and scope of this practice policy

This policy primarily addresses the management of ‘personal health information’ in the practice.

The policy covers the following areas:

1. Privacy
2. Informing new patients
3. Patient access to your personal health information
4. Alteration of patient records
5. Access to personal health information by practice staff for the purposes of research, professional development and quality assurance/improvement
6. Confidentiality agreements
7. Disclosure to third parties
8. Requests for personal health information and medical records by other medical practices
9. Security
10. Complaints about privacy related matters
11. Retention of medical records

This policy:

- is based on The Handbook for the Management of Health Information in Private Medical Practice published in November 2002;
- is consistent with the National Privacy Principles for the Fair Handling of Personal Information in the Federal Privacy Act 1988 as amended; and
- takes into account legislation pertaining to privacy in NSW.

While the policy focuses on the management of your health record, it also relates to other recorded information, for example Medicare data, billing and accounting records, pathology and radiology results, medical certificates and letters to and from hospitals and other doctors.

If you have any questions or complaints with regard to our collection, use or management of your personal information, please contact:

Andrew Beban
Practice Manager
Albemarle Medical Practice, 482 Old South Head Road, Rose Bay, NSW 2028

Privacy

Personal health information is defined as information concerning your health, medical history, or past or present medical care; and which is in a form that enables or could enable you to be identified. It includes information about your current medical situation, your medical history and your express wishes concerning current and future health services.

All GPs and practice staff will ensure that you can discuss issues relating to your health, and that the GP can record relevant personal health information, in a setting that provides visual privacy and protects against any conversation being overheard by a third party.

Staff will not enter a consultation room during a consultation without knocking or otherwise communicating with the GP. Staff, registrars and students will not be present during the consultation without your consent.

Clinical and Administrative staff may only view, access, use and disclose personal health information when it is necessary for them to do so in order to carry out their work duties.

Informing new patients

New patients will be offered access to the practice information policy. This practice tries to make sure that the information on privacy available to patients is appropriate for the range of people who come here. Feedback about the information is welcome.

Practice staff will ensure that current leaflets about the practice's approach to personal privacy are at practice reception. Information provided to patients, both by GPs and staff verbally, and in writing through practice leaflets will advise that, for the purpose of patient care and teaching, this practice normally allows access to patient records by:

- other GPs in the practice
- GP locums
- Nursing staff, and
- general practice registrars attached to the practice for training.

You have the opportunity to limit access to your record and your gp will note any requirements in the 'alert' section of the computerised record. vGPs will make a contemporaneous note in your record outlining your consent to the collection and use of information that is particularly sensitive.

The practice staff, including its GPs will endeavour to ensure that continuing patients of the practice are informed about the impact of changes to privacy legislation, by bringing relevant materials to the attention of continuing patients.

Patient access to personal health information

Under privacy legislation provisions you have the right to access your health information stored at the practice. The treating GP will provide an up to date and accurate summary of your health information on request or whenever appropriate.

The treating GP will consider any requests you may make for access to your medical record. In doing so the GP will need to consider the risk of any physical or mental harm resulting from the disclosure of health information.

If the GP is satisfied that you may safely obtain the record then he/she will either show you the record, or arrange for provision of a photocopy, and explain the contents to you.

Alternatively, a request for your personal information may be made in writing to the Practice Manager, Albemarle Avenue Practice, 482 Old South Head Road, Rose Bay, NSW 2028. This request must be accompanied with photo identification. The practice will respond to your request for access within 7 days of receiving payment of the fee for access, or within 45 days of the request, whichever is the later.

Any information that is provided by others (such as information provided by a referring medical practitioner or another medical specialist) is part of the health record and can be accessed by you.

If personal information is provided to you as the result of a request, you will be charged $27.50 for costs incurred in providing that information such as photocopying, the administration time involved in processing your request and postage.

Alteration of patient records

This practice will alter personal health information at your request when the request for alteration is straightforward (e.g. amending an address or telephone number).

With most requests to alter or correct information, the General Practitioner will annotate your record to indicate the nature of the request and whether the GP agrees with it. For legal reasons, the doctor will not alter or erase the original entry.

Access to personal health information by practice staff for the purposes of research, professional development and quality assurance/improvement.

New Patients will also be informed that the practice undertakes research, professional development, and quality assurance/improvement (QA) activities from time to time, to improve individual and community health care and practice management.

The practice operates an opt out system for recalls and contact. By becoming a patient of our practice you agree to participate in a recall or reminder system. Should you wish to opt out you must notify the practice in writing and the doctor will make a note of this in your record.

Should the practice decide to stop a recall or reminder system, we will write to each person on the system at your last known address, and advise you that the system will be ceasing.

You will be informed when quality improvement, professional development and research activities are being conducted and given the opportunity to 'opt out' of any involvement in these activities. The GP responsible for the activity will ensure that appropriate information is available to you from the reception staff.

When research projects are conducted in the practice under the approval of an institutional ethics committee, staff will be made aware of the requirements to obtain consent specified in the research protocol and ensure that consent is properly obtained.

Where possible identifying information will be removed from personal health information being used for research and QA activities. Where this is not possible, internal staff accessing personal health information are aware that they are under an obligation of confidentiality not to disclose the information. Breaches of that obligation may result in instant dismissal. The GP from the practice who is responsible will ensure that any external researchers are also under an explicit written obligation of confidentiality with appropriate penalties for disclosure.

Confidentiality agreements

In order to protect personal privacy, this practice has staff, including temporary or casual staff; sub-contractors (e.g. software providers etc) and medical students sign a confidentiality agreement.

Disclosure to third parties

GPs and staff will ensure that personal health information is disclosed to third parties only where your written consent has been obtained. Exceptions to this rule occur when disclosure is necessary to manage a serious and imminent threat either to your health or welfare, or the health and welfare of those around you. There are occasions where disclosure without consent is required by law.

The GP will refer to relevant legislation and your maturity (in the case of a minor) before deciding whether you can make decisions about the use and disclosure of information independently (ie without the consent of a parent or guardian). For example, for you to consent to treatment, the GP must be satisfied that you (a minor) is aware and able to understand the nature, consequences and risks of the proposed treatment. You are then also able to make decisions on the use and disclosure of his or her health information.

GPs will explain the nature of any information about you to be provided to other people, for example, in letters of referral to hospitals or specialists. You consent to the provision of this information by agreeing to take the letter to the hospital or specialist, or by agreeing for the practice to send it.

GPs and staff will disclose to third parties only that information which is required to fulfil your needs.

These principles apply to the personal information provided to a treating team (for example, a physiotherapist or consultant physician also involved in a person's care). The principles also apply where the information is transferred by other means, for example, via an intranet.

Information you have indicated is restricted will not be disclosed to third parties without your explicit consent. GPs will make a contemporaneous note when such permission is given. Information disclosed to Medicare or other health insurers will be limited to the minimum required to obtain insurance rebates or to confirm billings details for workers compensation claims.

Should an outstanding debt be referred to a collection agency, this practice will provide only the contact details of the debtor and the amount of the debt. No other personal information will be provided. Information supplied in response to a court order will be limited to the matter under consideration by the court.

From time to time General Practitioners will provide our medical defence organisation or insurer with information, in order to meet our insurance obligations. This practice participates in practice accreditation, which helps us improve the quality of its services. Practice accreditation may involve the 'surveyors' who visit the practice reviewing patient records to ensure that appropriate standards are being met. This practice will advise patients when practice accreditation is occurring by placing a notice in the foyer prior to the survey visit occurring. You will be given the opportunity of refusing accreditation surveyors access to your health information.

Requests for personal health information and medical records by other medical practices

Access to accurate and up to date information about you by a new treating GP is integral to the GP providing high quality health care. This practice engages an after-hours service to provide care, and will allow this service to have access to a patient's personal health information in order to assist the after-hours service provide high quality care.

If a patient transfers away from the practice to another GP, and you request that the medical record be transferred, the existing GP will provide the record, a summary, or a photocopy to the new treating GP or to you. This practice will retain original documents and records. This practice will seek written permission from you for the provision of personal health information to another medical practice.

Security

Medical practitioners, practice staff and contractors will protect personal health information against unauthorised access, modification or disclosure and misuse and loss while it is being stored or actively used for continued management of your health care.

Staff will ensure that patients, visitors and other health care providers to the practice do not have unauthorised access to the medical record storage area or computers.

Staff will ensure that records, pathology test results, and any other papers or electronic devices containing personal health information are not left where they may be accessed by unauthorised persons. Non clinical staff will limit your access to personal health information to the minimum necessary for the performance of your duties. Fax, e-mail and telephone messages will be treated with security equal to that applying to medical records.

Computer screens will be positioned to prevent unauthorised viewing of personal health information. Through the use of, for example, password-protected screen-savers, staff will ensure that computers left unattended cannot be accessed by unauthorised persons.

Medical practitioners and staff will ensure that personal health information held in the practice is secured against loss or alteration of data. This includes adherence to national encryption protocols.

Patient records will not be removed from the practice, except when required by clinical staff for patient care purposes. Records will be kept securely while away from the practice and the responsible clinician will ensure that records are returned to the practice and left in an appropriate place for filing.

Manual medical records and other papers containing personal health information will be filed promptly after each patient contact.

Staff will ensure that manual and electronic records, computers, other electronic devices and filing areas are secured at the end of each day and that the building is locked when leaving. The data on the computer system will be backed up daily and a duplicate backup tape/cartridge given to the nominated staff member for storage off site. Backups should be routinely tested to ensure daily duplication processes are valid and retrievable.

Complaints about privacy-related matters

Complaints about privacy-related matters will be addressed in the same way as other complaints. This procedure is outlined elsewhere in this practice's procedures manual.

Retention of medical records

It is the policy of the practice that individual patient medical records be retained until you have reached the age of 25 or for a minimum of 7 years from the time of last contact, whichever is the longer. No record will be destroyed at any time without the permission of the treating GP or of the authorised GP in the practice.

In the event of a GP dying or transferring out of the practice, the practice will post a notice in the practice waiting room, or a GP who is leaving the practice may write individually to each patient, asking them to nominate a practitioner to whom the record should be transferred.

If the practice closes, patients will be contacted individually or, if this is not practical, a public notice will be placed in the local newspaper indicating how patients may arrange for your record to be transferred to another GP.

In the event of the practice closing, it has been arranged that any medical records not transferred will be stored securely under the supervision of Dr Jeff Jankelson.
